State leaders honored the Dayton Flyers basketball team for their unlikely run to the Elite 8 Thursday.

In an event at UD Arena, the team met with a number of local officials, including Ohio Gov. John Kasich who congratulated them on their run. It was also chance to bring to light the region's efforts promoting the First Four, the annual play-in games which have been held in Dayton for several years.

"It represents the spirit of Dayton," Kasich said. "I hope the city can, and will, do more to recognize what these young men did and invest in these guys to make sure they have a future in Ohio."

Kasich also applauded University of Dayton Flyers head coach Archie Miller, before himself donning a jersey emblazoned "Kasich" on the back.

Gov. Kasich honors UD men's team

ABC 22

DAYTON -- Governor John Kasich (R) made a special trip to Dayton to honor the Flyers men's basketball team after the program reached the Elite Eight for the first time since 1984.

Since the team wasn't allowed to miss any more class they could not travel to Columbus so the Governor came to them.
